

Professional Bio: Adam Davis

Adam Davis is the Communications Strategist at the National Association of Secondary School Principals. Previously, Adam worked on policy and communications for a teacher advocacy organization, where he elevated the voices of educators in creating the policies that affect them and their students. He also worked in the New York State Assembly and as a middle school science teacher in Los Angeles. In the latter position, he led 40 students to compete in and complete the LA Marathon. Not surprisingly, he enjoys running around his home of Brooklyn.