

Professional Bio: Brooke Hathaway Angst

Brooke Hathaway Angst, an alumna of Texas A&M University with a B.A. in Psychology and Spanish, has an extensive background in education and child advocacy. Her career began with teaching in Title I schools in Texas. She furthered her education with an M.Ed. in Curriculum & Instruction, specializing in Early Childhood from Concordia University, and later pursued additional graduate studies in Psychology Counseling at St. Edward's University.

Brooke is known for her work as a training consultant for school districts across the U.S. and has played a pivotal role in managing advocacy programs for at-risk children and youth within the child welfare system. Her expertise is further underscored by her certification as a Trust Based Relational Intervention (TBRI) Practitioner and Educator from Texas Christian University's Karin Purvis Institute for Child Development.

Since relocating to the Bitterroot Valley in 2020, Brooke has been instrumental in providing advocacy and training in local schools. Her commitment extends beyond professional realms, as evidenced by her active involvement in local non-profits through part-time work and volunteering. Additionally, she serves as the Outreach Director for the Porter Project in Montana.

Brooke is deeply committed to enhancing educational practices. She believes in equipping educators with the necessary knowledge and tools to address the diverse needs of all students, adhering to the principle that better awareness leads to better practices.
