John Jenson has spent the past 30 years making sure professionals present themselves and represent their organizations at the highest possible level. He has worked with many different clients across the country, including Hunter Douglas, Verizon, and Target. John has authored nine books and produced three corporate training films to help organizations and their employees develop their message and then articulate that message in a way that gets results. Over the past five years, John has teamed up with Jostens to bring this message to thousands of schools. This work is centered around helping schools find their identity and become more meaningful in the process.
