Abstract: Changes in leadership with U.S. Secretary of Education Betsy DeVos and passage of the Every Student Succeeds Act have raised questions about the appropriate federal role in education and have brought renewed concerns over the role of the federal government in ensuring equity, particularly given the Administration's push for vouchers and expanded school choice. In this keynote, Lance Fusarelli discusses the retreating federal role in education, what it means for principals, superintendents, and community leaders, and the challenges as well as the opportunities presented by these changes.
